

What is Ecopod?

Ecopod is an easy-to-use refill kiosk that dispenses cleaning solutions and personal care products into refillable containers. Ecopod was patented to reduce plastic pollution by shifting retail away from single-use plastic towards a more sustainable refill-based system.

How does it work?

To use the kiosk, customers simply place their container in the dispensing hub, select a product, then pay via credit card, cash, or Apple Pay. The product of choice is then pumped through a tube and released into the container. The machine calibrates the amount released based on weight and automatically shuts off when full. It can also be adjusted to fill according to the payment received.

The Ecopod system is designed to dispense up to five products, which are stored in 15-gallon canisters in the back of the module. For larger volume products, 30-gallon canisters are also available. The kiosk automatically sends sales reports electronically to your email. The sales reports track dispensing for each kiosk, uniquely identified by GPS location. When a canister is running low on a product, the system sends a message to a designated iPhone. The empty canisters can be easily replaced with a full canister by existing employees. Empty canisters are then collected for refilling and redistribution.

The kiosk panels are made of aluminum with plastic buttons and an inlaid flat tv screen, which can be used for promotional or educational purposes. The kiosk measures 48" (depth) x 48" (width) x 74" and weighs about 225 kilograms. We also have a smaller machine available measuring 30" (depth) x 48" (width) x 69" (height). Compatible bottles are ideally 8-10" tall with a 2" opening. Electricity usage is about 120 volts. Ecopod is a patented technology (Patent No. US 9,440,842 B1). See patent here.
